FARMER BADLY GORED BY INFURIATED BULL

Escaped Death by Crawling Under Stable Trough Until Son Arrives.

COLLAR BONE BROKEN

W. E. Johnson, Tenant Farmer on Gen. Beaver Farm, Near Pine Grove Mills, Also Had Several Ribs Fractured—Rescued By Son.

W. E. Johnson, tenant farmer on the General James A. Beaver farm, near Pine Grove Mills, had a narrow escape from being killed by an enraged bull on Friday of last week. As it was he had several ribs and his collar bone broken and was badly bruised about the body. Mr. Johnson was only saved from being trampled to death by crawling under a trough in the barn and in that manner holding himself beyond reach of the bull until his son, Chester arrived. The latter armed himself with a pitchfork and after some trouble succeeded in driving the bull away until Mr. Johnson could escape.

This was not the first trouble experienced with the bull. Earlier in the week Chester Johnson had a spirited struggle with the animal, but escaped without injury beyond some painful bruises. On Friday his father was attempting to stable the bull when the animal suddenly became enraged and furiously charged down upon him. Mr. Johnson was thrown violently to the ground in the stall. He was terribly trampled and it seemed that he had no chance for escape when, with considerable presence of mind, he crawled under the trough in the stall. His calls for help attracted the attention of his son, who at once went to the rescue.

CHURCH DEBT LIFTED

Rededicated Edifice at Hublersburg is Free from $700 Debt.

The congregation of the Hublersburg Reformed church have the happy satisfaction of knowing that their handsome church, which was rededicated on Sunday morning, last, is free from a debt amounting to upward of $700. A part of the amount had previously been pledged and at the rededicatory services more than the required fund was easily raised, half of it being in cash.

Rev. Dr. A. M. Schmidt, of Bellefonte, preached the dedicatory sermon and directed the lifting of the contributions with which to free from debt, the church which has been handsomely remodeled. Rev. H. I. Crow, who has been pastor of the church for some time past, rededicated the edifice. John Hoy, Jr., presented the church with an individual commonion service.

A special meeting of the West Susquehanna Classis was held at Hublersburg and the pastoral relations of Rev. Mr. Crow were dissolved and he was transferred to the Eastern Pennsylvania Classis. Mr. Crow will become pastor of the Reformed church at Bethlehem.

Makes Tax Return.

The State has made the following return on taxes in Bellefonte borough: poor, $6804; street, $12,408.47, school, $18,803.15; interest, corporation occupation, etc., $48,215.63. This makes a total of $86,231.25. It is estimated that the tax duplicate for Tax Collector J. Kennedy Johnston will represent about $63,000, making his commission on the same amount to upward of from $1500 to $1800.

Child Dies After Operation.

Hilda, the bright 11-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Gearhart, of near State College, died at the Bellefonte hospital following an operation on Wednesday of last week. The child dreaded the thought of an operation and with no little reluctance consented to go to the hospital. Her death followed a short time after the operation.

Hospital Notes.

Operations—Toner A. Hugg, Milesburg; Miss Lillian Smith, Mrs. Teressa Davis, Bellefonte.

Admitted for treatment—Mrs. Mary Thomas, Williamsport.

Discharged—Miss Bessie Shirk, Runville; Miss Minnie Cole, Bellefonte.

New Candidates in Field.

Captain Henry H. Montgomery and John D. Sourbeck have entered the race for Republican nomination for overseer of the poor in Bellefonte borough. John Trafford, of Bellefonte, is a new entry in the field for the Democratic nomination for Register.

MISS HARPER WEDS

Popular Bellefonte Girl Becomes Bride of Scranton Lawyer.

A quiet but very pretty wedding was that at the Bellefonte Reformed church, at 11 o'clock, on Saturday morning, last, when Miss Jane Mildred Harper, of this place, became the bride of Mr. Joseph Archibald Saxe, of Scranton. The bride is one of Bellefonte's most charming and popular young ladies and is a daughter of the late Jonathan Harper. The groom is a young lawyer and is located at Scranton. Mr. and Mrs. Saxe will reside at Scranton.

Originally it was planned having the wedding ceremony performed at the home of the bride's brother, G. Edward Harper, at Curtin. This was changed, however, and the pretty event was solemnized in the bride's church, in Bellefonte, Rev. Dr. Ambrose M. Schmidt officiating. There were no invitations and the wedding was entirely informal. The guests were immediate relatives and intimate friends of the happy young couple. The eve of the wedding day was attended with a feature which might have necessitated a postponement of the nuptial plans. The bride for several weeks had been making her home with the Mrs. Charles Smith family, on Bishop Street. One of the Seixas children, visiting there, developed what was feared to be diphtheria and it was decided to quarantine the house. The bride learned of the intention of the health authorities only in time to hurriedly pack her wedding clothes and leave. Several hours later the house was quarantined.

Following the ceremony at the church a beautiful wedding breakfast was served in the ladies' parlor at the Bush House. The party were seated at one table, covers being laid for fifteen. The table decorations were in pink and white, the room being partly darkened to make the more effective tastefully arranged electric lights concealed beneath the floral decorations. Those at the breakfast, in addition to the bride and groom, were the following: G. E. Saxe and Mrs. S. G. Hull, of Scranton, father and sister of the groom; Mr. and Mrs. G. Edward Harper, Rome Harper, Miss Lulu Harper, Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Ambrose M. Schmidt, Mrs. J. Herbert Robb, Mrs. Emma J. Yeager, Miss Lulu Smith, Mrs. John McCoy and Mrs. Margaret Evans, the last named being from Lock Haven.

Mr. and Mrs. Saxe departed on an early afternoon train on their wedding tour, which will include a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Schreyer, at Chicago.

The complete schedule for the season follows:

October 21—Villa Nova at home.

October 28—University of Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia.

Toadstools Kill Two.

Two members of a family named Reed, living near the Boone's mountain in the Penfield district, near DuBois, are dead and two others are in a critical condition, although now thought to be out of danger, as the result of eating toadstools or some other fungus growth in mistake for mushrooms.

It was early last week that one of the family gathered the fatal plant and took a large amount home where the entire family partook of them. The mother and two sons and a daughter were immediately taken sick and in spite of the efforts of a physician, the condition of the former grew rapidly worse and death occurred.

The fate of the other members of the family remained in doubt until late Saturday when, during the funeral of the mother, one of the sons died and the conditions changed for the better and they are on a fair way to recovery, although not out of danger yet.

Last Day For Petitions.

Saturday, next, September 9, is the last day for filing petitions by persons desiring to have their names printed on the official ballot for the primaries on September 30. All petitions must be filed with the County Commissioners.

TELLS "THE REPUBLICAN" OF NEW PRISON PLANS

Warden Francies Explains Several Important Requirements.

MAKES A SECOND VISIT

Inspects Additional Farms in Centre County on Tuesday—No Decision Reached as to Where State Institution will be Located.

John Francies, warden of the western penitentiary, at Pittsburg, on Tuesday visited Centre County for the second time in his search for a suitable site for the proposed new penitentiary and farm prison. As outlined in "The Republican," following Warden Francies' first visit here, the State proposes building a large prison to which will be removed the convicts now confined in the eastern and western penitentiaries. It is the intention to build the prison in the central part of the State if a desirable location may be had and the price asked for the land is not boosted to an exhorbitant figure.

Warden Francies arrived in an automobile from Clearfield about noon on Tuesdag and after dinner at the Bush House Mr. Francies and J. Linn Harris visited several farms nearby Bellefonte. On Tuesday evening Warden Francies was tendered an informal reception at the Bush House, quite a few Bellefonte business men calling to make his acquaintance. Just what site he will recommend will not be known until he submits a formal report to the State Prison Board.

Warden Francies and the editor of "The Republican" have been personal friends for a number of years. After greeting a number of citizens of Bellefonte at the Bush House, Warden Francies visited "The Republican" office, where he chatted in an informal way for an hour or two regarding the general plan of the the proposed new prison. What he had to say was extremely interesting. Summarized, if Warden Francies' plans materialize, the prison to be built will be the most modern in the world.

Three vital features are embodied in the general plan of things required in the site which will eventually be selected. The land, which must comprise 3,000 acres or more, must contain the necessary stone with which to erect the prison buildings. These buildings will be sufficiently large to shelter from 2,000 to 3,000 convicts. In the western penitentiary one million gallons of water a day are required at the present time. Warden Francies estimates that the site to be selected must have a water capacity of upward of three millions a day. Equally important is the requirement that the site must contain good farm land, for it is proposed placing the convicts at work upon the farms making up a part of the site.

In a general way, it is the plan of Warden Francies to have the convicts maintain themselves, thus saving the State hundreds of thousands of dollars a year. It is his plan to have them raise on the farms the food they eat and make in the factory departments the clothing, shoes, etc., they wear. The plan makes provision for the health, mentally and physically, of the convicts. By placing them at work in the open air it is the belief of Warden Francies that the State will be saved thousands of dollars each year now spent for medicines. Under the present system there is not sufficient labor to occupy the time of the convicts. Many of them are absolutely idle. Close confinement, Warden Francies explained, drives many convicts into insanity each year.

The advantage to the community securing the new prison may be best understood when it is explained that it would mean the building of homes for about one thousand officers, all of whom reside outside the prison. It will be seen from this one feature, alone, that the location of the new prison means the establishment of a new colony of residents in that particular section. The officers are well paid, are in the employ of the State, and their salaries would mean the circulation of upward of $100,000 in cash each month. The officers do not receive their living supplies from the prison and their necessary purchases would, of course, be distributed among the several business places in the community.

The advantage to Bellefonte in having the new prison located within a reasonable distance from the town is not to be over-estimated. If this section offers a site which meets the requirements, Bellefonte business men should not allow to pass by default an opportunity to enlist the sympathetic support of Governor Tener and Warden Francies.

HUSTLING FOR VOTES FOR WOMEN CANDIDATES

Fair Campaigners Pull Door Bells For School Board Aspirants.

HAVE A PLAFORM, TOO

Seventeen "Pithy, Practical Points" Presented by Supporters to Advance Candidacy of Mrs. Roger S. Brouse and Mrs. Charles Gilmore.

Mrs. Roger S. Brouse and Mrs. Charles Gilmore, who have been entered by the women of Bellefonte as candidates for the two years terms as school directors, are the only candidates in the field for any offices who have a distinctive platform of their own. This week witnessed a number of fair campaigners making a house-to-house canvass and distributing printed circulars setting forth seventeen "pithy, practical points" in behalf of Mrs. Brouse and Mrs. Gilmore. The circular also calls upon voters to "Read, think, vote for the women." Here are the seventeen "pithy, practical points":

1. Our women candidates are property owners.
2. They have culture, refinement and experience.
3. The two women will do more effectual work on the board than one.
4. The importance of the duties entrusted to them will be appreciated.
5. Both candidates are products of the public schools; their children educated in the same.
6. They have intimate knowledge of the school system.
7. They stand for the betterment of conditions.
8. They have leisure to visit the schools.
9. Being mothers, they can be both friend and critic of the teachers and schools.
10. They may be voted for without endorsing any one party. Make their election sure.
11. Men believe that women render valuable service to the children and to the schools, and so make good directors.
12. Women on the School Board protest against rewarding party service without regard to fitness or ability.
13. By the Constitution of Pennsylvania, women are eligible for any position in the management of the Public Schools.
14. Pennsylvania should lead in the efforts to make the Public School System in the State the best in the country. Women can do this.
15. Let Bellefonte honor these women and be honored in return.
16. Look for the names of the women candidates on the ballot and vote for them.
17. Will you, honest voter, use influence to secure representation for women on the School Board?

Just which member or members of the old school board are giving a sly dig by No. 12, of the "pithy, practical points," is not revealed. Point No. 10 means that Mrs. Brouse and Mrs. Gilmore have been entered for nomination on both Democratic and Repuplican tickets and that the thought of their supporters is that their candidacy is in no sense a partisan one.

The following statement was also issued in support of the candidacy of Mrs. Brouse and Mrs. Gilmore:

While it is true that by the Constitution of Pennsylvania, women are eligible, as they ought to be, for any position in the management of the Public Schools, we do not find them selected in any great number in the state. In this respect, Pennsylvania differs from many states, especially the western states, in which women fill many important school offices. In California one remarkable woman is serving upon the State Board of Education.

The nominating committee presents the following report as the result of its deliberations. It first wishes to announce the "School Board Platform"—Women on the School Boards to secure the best welfare of the family, state and town.

The present day demands members who will not drift into political control, who have leisure to visit the schools; who will attend to the ventilation; who will see that the janitor does his work thoroughly from basement to top floor; who will control the correct number of pupils in a class room; who will see that light light falls upon the desks, who will be the sympathetic friend of the teacher at the same time that they give attention to the mental, physical and moral development of the children.

Members of a school board should have intelligence, tact, common sense and a knowledge of the school system.

Heifer in Bear Trap.

While in the mountains, near Beech Creek, salting cattle boxes several days ago, Ammon Gramley, of Coleville, and William Cox, of Marsh Creek, heard moans as if from some animal in distress. Upon investigating they found a young heifer, fast in a bear trap, the steel jaws firmly closed upon one of the animal's fore legs. The leg was frightfully lacerated and indications were that the heifer had been held a prisoner several days. An ear tag showed that it belonged to Conard Glouck, tenant farmer on the farm of the late J. W. Merrey, in Bald Eagle township, Clinton County, who was notified and who later shot the animal to put it out of its misery.

Giant Tomatoes.

Isaac Dawson, of Bellefonte, several days ago exhibited a basket of tomatoes that attracted no little attention. When one speaks of a basketful of tomatoes one naturally supposes that it contains anywhere from fifty to one hundred tomatoes. In this case, however, the basketful comprised exactly six tomatoes. They were the largest the writer had ever seen. One of the tomatoes weighed two pounds. The six tomatoes weighed nine pounds. They were grown by Mr. Dawson's brother, James Dawson, an engineer residing at Tyrone, who has on numerous occasions had remarkable success in growing unusually large specimens of fruit and vegetables.

Missionary to China Speaks.

On Monday evening of next week, September 11, Rev. W. I. Shambaugh, a missionary in the United Evangelical church who is home on a furlough, will speak in the Bellefonte United Evangelical church on work in China. Mr. Shambaugh is a young man, is deeply consecrated to his work and makes a good impression wherever he goes. The pastor, Rev. J. F. Hower, estends acordial invitation to members and friends of all denominations to attend this service.

New Bank for Philipsburg.

Philipsburg is to have a new bank, to be known as the Citizens' National Bank. A syndicate of business men from Lock Haven Syracuse, Buffalo and New York haven taken a ten years' lease on the ground floor of the residence of Mrs. R. L. Pierce. Vaults and reception rooms for the bank will be built on Second Street.

BELL RINGS SATURDAY ON FILING PETITIONS

Three Days Left for Candidates to Get on Primary Ballots.

ALL BUT A FEW NOW IN

Flood of Papers Pours into Office of The County Commissioners—Saturday, Sept. 9, Last Day For Filing—Big Task Preparing Ballots.

The bell rings on Saturday on the filing of petitions with the County Commissioners by candidates who want their names printed on the official ballots for the primaries, September 30. The last few days have witnessed a flood of petitions pouring into the Court House. Each mail is loaded down with bundles of petitions, each petition telling of a hope that is to be realized or smashed to smithereens when the primary vote is counted three weeks from this coming Saturday.

Virtually all of the aspirants for nomination for County offices have filed their petitions. One or two stragglers have their petitions ready but thus far have not entered them for filing. A petition must be filed by each aspirant for nomination, from County offices to precinct offices, and by the time the office of the County Commissioners is closed on Saturday, next, it is estimated that several thousand petitions will be on record.

On Monday begins the gigantic task of sorting out the mass of petitions, classifying them by parties and then arranging the several groups of candidates for each office in alphabetical order. All this will be necessary to prepare for the printing of the primary ballots. A separate ballot is printed for each party entitled to participate in the primaries. For each borough, ward, precinct or township a separate ballot must be printed. Some idea of the task involved in the preparation of the primary ballots may be had from the fact that there will be several thousand names to handle, each name must be spelled as it is written in the petition and then placed in its proper place in the ballot for that particular district. Petitions for candidates for County offices filed up to last night follows:

POTASH DEPOSITS

Work of the United States Geological Survey in the Arid Region.

An investigation into possible sources of potash salts in the United States is being made this year by the United States Geological Survey under an appropriation by Congress of $20,000 for the current year.

One of the possible sources from which potash may be derived is in association with saline deposits left by the drying up of large bodies of salty waters, such as are known to have existed at one time in many of the now desert areas of southwest Oregon, Nevada, southeast California, in Utah, and elsewhere. It is hoped that by testing these saline deposits some may be found sufficiently rich in potash to have a commercial value, and that there may even be located some large and important deposits.

As a part of this work the Survey will soon fit up a temporary laboratory at Fallon, Nev., for the purpose of testing samples of salines from the Great Basin or desert areas.

Samples of such alkaline salts will be tested at this laboratory free of charge if a definite statement of the locality from which they were obtained be sent with the samples. The location should be given by section, township and range, if possible, otherwise by distance and direction from the nearest post office or settlement. Samples should be addressed to Hoyt S. Gule, United States Geological Survey, Fallon, Nev. Upon receipt of a request small sample sacks for sending the material by mail will be forwarded from the above address.

If so requested at the time that a sample is submitted for test, the accompanying information concerning the locality of the deposit will be treated as confidential; and the evidence thus obtained is not to be used for the purpose of making land withdrawals.

Dress Hints.

In the month of September dress enters upon one of its most attractive phases. Fashion by now has launched the last of her summer novelties. The usual crop of eccentricities, which no season is without, have all been tried and many have been found wanting. At the smart watering places new modes will still be inaugurated by the dressmakers and milliners, but they are the forerunners of autumn fashion, and the last word has been said in summer dress proper.

Cotton voile is, perhaps, the most interesting of summer fabrics. During the last few weeks it has been the foundation of some of the most elaborate as well as the simplest and most girlish-looking of toilets.

Heavily embroidered in floss silk—in shell pin shades, say, with a touch of black, or in pale sulphur tones, also with a little black, white cotton voile yields as elegant a toilet as the most fastidious women could wish.

The Popular Fichu The fichu style of trimming, by the way, is much to the fore in garden party gowns. The picturesque lines of the fichu of net, lace or chiffon or crepe, seem to blend peculiarly with floral muslin and cotton voile, while in the somewhat heavier materials, such as linen and tussore, the fichu of eyelet embroidery is a happy inspiration.

Pure white tussore—a material beloved of Paris, but by no means so universally used in this county—is another dress material of quiet distinction. It is a most comfortable fabric in wear, too, for besides being soft and light, it affords adequate protection against the hot sun.

Dinner Hints.

The proper number of shell fish, oysters or clams for the individual plate at dinner is a half dozen. They should be served on their own shells on a bed of crushed ice, and with them go pepper, both red and black; horse-radish, slices of lemon, salt or any desired relish.

Soup is served in deep plates stood on the flat plate holding the napkin and roll. Both plates are removed when the soup is finished.

At an informal dinner beginning with the soup course the hostess serves the soup from a tureen at her place, either passing it along with the help of the guests or giving it to the maid to pass, if she possesses such a luxury.

Take up soup with an outward motion but do not draw the spoon toward you. Place the lips to the side, not the end of the spoon.

Individual salt cellars have been abandoned in favor of two large cellars placed at either end of the table. A number ot small cellars detract from the symmetry of the table, while the larger ones are decorative in effect.

Make all apologies for accidents occurring at the table quiet rather than profuse. Address the hostess, not the diners, and do not revert to the mishap constantly. Self-possession is a mark of the thoroughbred, and should be carefully practiced at all times.

Before you Reach the Limit.

Of physical endurance and while your condition is still curable, take Foley Kidney Pills. Their quick action and positive results will delight you. For backache, nervousness, rheumatism, and all kidney, bladder and urinary troubles. Sold by C. M. Parrish.

A healthy man is a king in his own right; an unhealthy man is an unhappy slave. Burdock Blood Bitters builds up sound health—keeps you well.

EASILY DECIDED

This Question Should Be Answered Easily by Bellefonte People.

Which is wiser—to have confidence in the opinions of your fellow-citizens, of people you know, or depend on statements made by utter strangers residing in far-away places? Read the following:

Mrs. C. Johnson, 365 E. Bishop St., Bellefonte, Pa., says: "I cannot say too much in praise of Doan's Kidney Pills, for they are the best remedy I ever used for backache and other symptoms of kidney trouble. At one time my back was so lame and painful that I could hardly get around and dizzy spells were common. I was restless at night and my kidneys gave me great annoyance, the kidney secretions being unnatural. On the advice of a member of my family who had used Doan's Kidney Pills with benefit, I procured a box at Green's Pharmacy Co., and they did me more good than any other medicine I had previously tried. The kidney secretions became natural and the pain and lameness in my back was removed. I heartily recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to anyone afflicted with kidney complaint." (Statement given Oct. 21, 1907.)

Permanent Relief. On Nov. 23, 1909 Mrs. Johnson was interviewed and she said: "I still have unlimited confidence in Doan's Kidney Pills. They permanently cured me of kidney trouble and I have had no need of a kidney medicine during the past two years. Other members of my family have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and benefit has always been received."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

What to Eat.

The fruit cupboard is the centre of housewifely attention these days, when so many fruits and vegetables all to overflowing grocery and market stands. A new delicacy is always welcomed on these shelves, where all sorts of wonderful flavors await the coming of winter.

Tomato Preserve.—Slice six lemons and boil until tender in three pints of water. Remove the lemon with a skimmer, add ten pounds of sugar to the water and boil until dissolved. Peel and slice ten pounds of partly ripe tomatoes, add to syrup, put back the lemons and boil fifteen minutes. Put away in closely covered jars.

To Can Crabapples.—To six pounds of crabapples use a syrup of one pint of water and three pounds of sugar. When the syrup boils drop in the apples, and when tender put the apples into jars and fill up with the syrup. It is better not to peel the apples, but to simply remove the cores.

Apple Butter—Boil ten gallons of sweet apple cider in a copper kettle until reduced to five gallons. Add slowly three pecks of good cooking apples that have been peeled and quartered, stir continually and boil from four to five hours. Add five ounces of ground cinnamon and ten pounds of sugar. Cook to the desired consistency and put away in earthen jars.

Every housewife is glad to add a few odd receipts to her cook book, which may serve to good purpose in time of unexpected guests. It is always well to know how to prepare a "hurry up dish." one of which is given below.

Rice, Chinese Style—Use equal amounts of rice and cold water. Wash the rice in three waters, place in a saucepan, add salt to taste and boil until tender, then put aside to soak until dry. This is the secret of the dryness and fluffiness of Chinese rice. Serve with powdered sugar and cream made frothy by whipping a few minutes, or with fresh butter and sugar.

Simple Aids to Beauty.

From the beginning of time there have been external applications for the removal of superfluous hair, and some undoubtedly have more virtue than others. None is permanent, though some kill the growth temporarily.

There are of course, occasional instances where the source of nourishment is dried by frequent use of an exterminating agent, but there is also this consideration, that the renewed growth is apt to be thicker than the original.

Peroxide sometimes acts beneficially. An old time remedy is composed of two parts sulphate of calcium to one part quicklime. The ingredients are powdered separately, though mingled, and kept dry in a tightly corked bottle. When applied they are made into a paste with water and spread over the growth and allowed to remain about ten minutes, or until there is a sensation of smarting. The paste is then washed off with soap and tepid water. If the irritation is pronounced a salve or some cold cream should be applied. The hairs will drop shortly.

Peroxide, while it acts slowly, sometimes gives the best results of any of the external applications, rendering them less conspicuous, and so dries the nourishment as to kill the root entirely. It is used merely by wetting the surface, but attention must be given that the skin is not injured by becoming over-dry.

Accidents will happen, but the best-regulated families keep Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil for such emergencies. It subdues the pain and heals the hurts.

Careless Packing Costly.

Flimsy, insufficient packing of goods for shipment costs American manufacturers many thousands of dollars every year. The introduction of cheap substitutes for substantial wooden cases is responsible for much of the trouble, although modern conditions of transportation and freight handling make it more necessary than ever before that goods in transit should be thoroughly protected. American consuls abroad have protested for years that bad packing lost a vast amount of trade to our exporters. Now the abuse has become a serious matter in respect to domestic shipments. More attention is given all the time to making packages attractive in appearance, but less care is taken to make them safe.

A Pittsburg traffic expert lately estimated that "in 85 per cent of the small-lot shipments moving today the construction of the material forming the box or crate, the size of the nails, etc., are entirely inadequate to protect the contents."

Fruit is shipped in paper-thin crates that are sometimes literally churned into pulp in transit. Tobacco is sent by rail in cases so flimsy that they can be perforated with a lead pencil. A shipment of tobacco in small bags arrived recently at Philadelphia with one-third of the cases so badly damaged that the contents could be easily removed through the breaks. Heavy hardware is seldom packed carefully enough to keep it from breaking through its casing. Very often no thought is taken of the damage that may be done to freight when packed in cars with heavy, rough, or pointed articles.

It is impossible for the carriers to prevent damage under such circumstances. The greatest care may be used in stowing goods in a car at the beginning of a haul, but as consignments for different stations are taken out, disarrangement follow that may be dangerous to the remaining freight, but a restowage at each stop of the train is impossible.

All authorities agree that the way to save the large sums now lost through insufficient packing is to go back to substantial wooden cases. No safe substitute has been found for them, although the first cost of the flimsy materials may be less.

Percy Blackford's Success.

It is good news to the Bellefonte friends of Percy Blackford to learn that he is meeting with the greatest success as a contracting plasterer. Percy is located at New Castle, Pa , and from one of the newspapers published there we learn that he has recently secured another fine contract. The newspaper article in question follows: "Percy Blackford, of New Castle, has secured a large contract at Woodlawn to plaster houses being erected for the Jones & Laughlin Steel Company. He has been awarded the contract to plaster 104 houses, it being one of the largest single contracts awarded at that place." This is Mr. Blackford's fourth large contract with the Jones & Laughlin Steel Company, making a total of 450 houses in two years. He is now figuring on a contract to plaster 550 houses for the same company in Kentucky. Mr. Blackford's reputation among his home people here is one of fair and square dealing and the best of workmanship. That he has established himself in the confidence of the business world in the western end of the State is demonstrated by the fact that such a large concern as the Jones & Laughlin Steel Company has just given him a fourth contract.

All My PimplesGone.

Girl Tells How a Blotchy Skin Was Cleansed by a Simple Wash.

"I was ashamed of my face," writes Miss Minnie Pickard of Altamahaw, N. C. "It was all full of pimples and scars, but after using D. D. D. Prescription I can say that now there is no sign of that Eczema, and that was three years ago."

D. D. D. has become so famous as a cure and instant relief in Eczema and all other serious skin diseases, that its value is sometimes overlooked in clearing up rash, pimples, blackheads, and all other minor forms of skin impurities.

The fact is, that while D. D. D. is so penetrating that it strikes to the very root of Eczema or any other serious trouble, the soothing Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol and other ingredients are so carefully compounded there is no wash for the skin made that can compare with this great household remedy for every kind of skin trouble.

D. D. D. is pleasant to use, perfectly harmless to the most delicate skin, and absolutely reliable. A 25 cent bottle will give you positive proof of the wonderful effectiveness of this great remedy.

"Yes-Y"

It Sounded Better Afterly Losing It

By CLARISSA MÆ

Copyright by American Psociation, 1911.

When Elizabeth Gray ed to Elmwood after a year spdth an uncle in a distant city, shed few changes in the quiet village morning after her arrival she laxentedly in the slant roofed littlen that had been hers since chill and listened to the familiar muf hammer and saw from the di shipyards.

Just then wood smoke reed her that her mother was gettbreakfast in the kitchen and withticking of remorse at her slothfuln Elizabeth arose and dressed.

"I thought the waffles wourouse you, Bess," smiled her mothas the girl entered the kitchen, fid and sparkling. "Here is the firsatch—take them in and begin yobreakfast. I"—

"Mother mine!" scolded abeth, leading the rosy cheeked, pit little woman into the dining roo "Sit right down and eat breakf with dad. I shall cook waffles forth of you. Not a word!"

She smiled back at the twoving faces as she passed to and f from kitchen to dining room minisng to their wants.

"We can't expect to keep h with us always," sighed her mother, "This last year without her has shen me how dreary it will be for us hen—somebody takes her away."

"By 'somebody' I suppose youmean Norman," boomed Mr. Gray's deep voice. "I don't know as thers another man in Elmwood, to say thing of the outside world, that I'd ather give my little Bess to than Nrman Ryder. Perhaps she has met omebody else in the city—you can't ell—and Norman's only country bred. Bess probably met some fine dandied chaps in New York."

"I'd rather it would be Norman," insisted Mrs. Gray, with a little frghtened flutter in her voice that vent straight to Elizabeth's heart. "I couldn't bea to have Bess marry anybody from the city. We might not see her from one year's end to the other."

Elizabeth hastened into the dining room with a plate of waffles scorched to a crisp and her fair face flushed and agitated.

"I've heard every word you said," she confessed between tears and laughter. "Dears, I'm not going to marry anybody. I haven't seen any one in New York that could tempt me away from you."

Mr. Gray squeezed the little hand she had laid in his broad palm and looked quizzically into her blue eyes.

"How about anybody in Elmwood, Bess?" he asked.

"I don't want to marry anybody!" flashed Elizabeth tearfully. "I want to stay right here all my life."

That evening Norman Ryder drove over to see Elizabeth Gray, and such is the contrariness of womankind, that he who had always found favor in her eyes, now appeared to be awkward and provincial in manner and speech, as compared to the showy youths she had met when visiting her uncle. Although he was bigger and broader and handsomer than any of the city bred youths, almost the first words he uttered seemed to place him in a different class.

"So you knew I had returned, Norman?" she asked, withdrawing her hands from his close grasp.

"Yes, yes!" he had cried delightedly, and it was that characteristic double affirmative uttered with a slight twang that drew a thin veil of discord between them. There was something about the expression that smacked strongly of the rustic; that, with the twang and the equally favored double negative, "No, no!" seemed to place Norman Ryder among the farmers and dairymen who formed the community about Elmwood.

Elizabeth hated herself for shuddering every time Norman spoke with a twang, but she couldn't help it. She was angry with him for speaking so—her father did not, nor did any of their neighbors. It was carelessness on Norman's part, and it grated on her sensibilities.

"I thought perhaps you'd answer my letters," he said rather ruefully, as he drew his chair near the glowing stove, "but I expect you were pretty busy studying your music. I'm going to ask you to play some of your classical pieces for me by and by."

"Of course I will," said Elizabeth. "I didn't write to anybody here except father and mother, and they said"—she paused with sudden confusion.

"I guess they said I came over here most every night while you were gone!" he grinned happily. "They let me read your letters—and that was next best to getting 'em myself."

"I didn't promise you I'd write," protested Elizabeth, rather stiffly.

"No, no!" he uttered quickly, exonerating her from blame. "But—but—I kind of thought you might answer one of 'em, and so I kept on writing."

"I was glad to hear from you, and I suppose it was mean of me never to answer any of them, but did mother give you the messages I sent?"

"Yes, yes! And that was something!" He looked so happy and so handsome that Elizabeth had to harden her heart against the magic of his dark eyes. Every time that nasal twang smote on her ear she winced, and after awhile she grew to counting the times he said "Yes, yes!" and "No, no!" If he would only break himself of using those expressions. But of course he could not know how they sounded. Everybody in Elmwood used them except a few persons like the minister and the doctor and lawyer and her own father. Outsiders laughed and called it part of the dialect of Buffum county.

When Elizabeth asked him if she should play for him Norman said "Yes, yes!" and when she asked if he had had enough music he cried hastily "No, no!" until her nerves were all a-jangle.

At last he arose to go, and there was a very tender look in his down bent eyes as he fingered his hat. "There was something I wanted to say to you, Bess. I wonder if I better say it now? I guess you know what it is." He looked steadily at her.

Elizabeth did not hesitate. She was angry with him for his rustic ways and provoked at herself because she was too narrow minded to overlook them.

"I don't believe you better say it," she said deliberately, her eyes on the small shoe that tapped the carpet.

His face whitened underneath the bronze, and there was a stricken look in his eyes. "I hardly dared to hope much since I heard you were coming home, but before you went away"—He choked a little and asked her a question, "Will you tell me why, Bess?"

She looked up at him with a strange hardness in her heart. "Do you really want me to tell you?" she asked.

"Yes, yes!" he said eagerly.

"That's it, Norman Ryder!" she flashed. "It's your Buffum county twang and your everlasting 'yes-yes' and 'no-no,' and you know better too!"

He stared at her, bewildered for a moment, and as the import of her words struck home he reddened deeply and all the tenderness fled from his eyes. "So that's the reason?" he said gratingly. "Well, Bess, there's no chance for me, then, because if you don't love me enough to overlook a mere habit of speech you don't love me as much as I want you to. I suppose I don't shine very brightly compared with the city fellows you've met, but I've loved you better than anybody else in the world ever could." He crammed on his hat and without another word left the house.

Elizabeth stood alone in the parlor, her eyes fixed in a frightened stare on the closed door, her heart pounding in unison with Norman's departing steps on the crisp snow.

It was bright moonlight, and scores of young people were coasting down the steep hill that ran past the Grays' home. Elizabeth heard their shouts of laughter and the frequent warning cry of "Road!"

The gate crashed into place behind Norman's impatient swing. There was the roar of a coming bobsled, a muffled thud and then shouts of distress.

Elizabeth reached the front gate at the same time her father and mother hurried to the same place, drawn by the sounds of an accident.

Somebody had been run down by the bobsled—somebody who lay, a dark motionless figure against the whiteness of the snow. Around his head the snow was stained a crimson that widened and widened horribly.

It was Norman Ryder, and when Elizabeth reached his side a little group of men were lifting him from the snow.

"Bring him into my house," commanded Mr. Gray, leading the way, and so they carried him across the doorstep which he had left in anger a few moments before and bore him upstairs to the front chamber.

A doctor was summoned, and while Mrs. Gray prepared bandages and other necessaries her husband built a roaring fire in the fireplace, and Elizabeth sat cold and numb beside that still form on the bed. Her hands rigidly held in place the bag of ice her mother laid on his forehead above the bandage that covered the deep cut. Her eyes were fixed on the white set features and closed lids and the finely chiseled lips which might part no more to utter the homely dialect of the country which she had despised and ridiculed.

She could not weep. She could only sit there, a miserable, heartbroken little figure, hating herself for her censorious words.

The doctor came and waved her aside. For an hour he worked over the young man, while Elizabeth sat in her own room breathless and despairing. Then at last she heard him going away, and instantly she was at the door of Norman's room. Her mother smilingly beckoned her within and left them alone together.

Norman, looking very pale, his head swathed in bandages, did not see her come in. For a moment she stood there looking down at him with her heart in her eyes.

Suddenly he looked up at her, smiling whimsically in the old way, as he had been used to do before she told him the unpleasant truths. He had looked that way when he was a boy growing up and she was a little girl trotting to school beside him.

"Doctor says I'll be all right in a day or so," he smiled. "But I'll have to keep still. You don't mind my being here in your house, do you, Bess?"

"No, no!" she cried, dropping unconsciously into the vernacular of Buffum county. She slipped to her knees beside the bed and leaned her sunny head against his shoulder.

Norman quivered and then laid one hand on her head. "Oh, Bess! You don't mean it! Do you love me?" he whispered.

"Yes, yes!" sobbed Elizabeth. And to them both it was the sweetest word in the world.

A Bride and Her Dowry.

The first colonial mint was established in 1612, but it worked only in brass. Forty years later Massachusetts entered upon the business of coining money.

The Pine Tree shilling is not only a part of the history, but of the romance of the colonies as well. The officers of the mint, or perhaps it would be better to say the mill, from which it was issued were John Hull and Robert Saunderson. They coined for the colony, but exacted a toll for their work, just as the man who ground grain for his neighbors was wont to do. Their profits were said to be enormous, and more than once it was suggested that a new arrangement should be made. They were satisfied, however, to keep at it in the old way.

After John Hill's daughter had been married to Samuel Sewell the old mint master invited all the wedding guests into one of the rooms of his house, where he instructed his daughter to get on to an improvised platform at the end of a pair of steelyards. In a tub at the other side the old man poured Pine Tree shillings until the scales balanced. "There, Sam," he said, "take her and her dowry. It's not every bride that's worth her weight in silver."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Soft Capped Projectiles.

Many persons know that certain armor piercing shells have soft metal caps on the point, with the result of greater effectiveness over those not so provided, but the way in which the cap acts is not generally well understood. A needle may be driven into a board with a hammer when it is thrust through a cork, whereas it would break off unsupported. Many have thought that the soft cap supports the hard point of the projectile in the same way. A British authority who has given much study to the mutual action of the projectile and armor states that a shell frequently fails because of the fact that a very small piece of the point is forced back into the mass, thus splitting it. A larger piece is then similarly forced back, and so on. The main advantage of the soft cap, in the opinion of this authority, is to prevent such splitting.—Harper's Weekly.

Praise For the Sardine.

It is encouraging in these days, when everything nice is condemned by scientific faddists as nasty, to have the high authority of the London Lancet in support of the popular theory that the sardine is of great dietetic value. The sardine is good, the Lancet tells us, because, for one thing, it encourages the consumption of oil, which tends to avoid "many ills, and especially those associated with wasting diseases and gouty dispositions." This consumption of sardine oil, it adds, "prevents the overloading of the tissues with nitrogenous waste products, and a digestible fat favors nutrition considerably. The sardine supplies also an excellent proportion (25 per cent) of nitrogenous material, and so it becomes a real and economical food. In addition to this the sardine has appetizing qualities, and where appetite serves digestion follows."

When Scotland Had a Navy.

It was James IV. who first created an effective navy for Scotland, exhausting all available timber for shipbuilding, so that he had to ask France and Denmark for more, and of the sixteen large and ten small ships he owned his special pride was the largest then existing. To build this Dreadnought of her day all the woods of Fife were laid waste. She cost £30,000, an enormous value in those times; had a crew of 300 sailors, 120 gunners and 1,000 marines, with "more great ordnance in her than the French king ever had to the siege of any town," as James himself boasted.—Westminster Gazette.

The First Phenix.

Legend tells us that the first phenix was born in the garden of Eden and had its nest in a great red rose, the first rose that ever bloomed. When the angel drove Adam and Eve out of paradise a spark of fire fell from the angel's fiery sword and burned up the phenix and his nest. Out of the ashes sprang a glorious bird, which also lived 500 years before mysteriously burning itself at every recurrence of which a new phenix is said to arise.

Proposed amendments to the Constitution submitted to the citizens of this Commonwealth for their approval or rejection, by the General Assembly of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and published by order of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, in pursuance of Article XVIII of the Constitution.

Number One.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, so as to consolidate the courts of common pleas of Allegheny County.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following amendment to the Constitution of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:—

That section six of article five be amended, by striking out the said section, and inserting in place thereof the following:

Section 6. In the county of Philadelphia all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the district courts and courts of common pleas, subject to such changes as may be made by this Constitution or by law, shall be in Philadelphia vested in five distinct and separate courts of equal and co-ordinate jurisdiction, composed of three judges each. The said courts in Philadelphia shall be designated respectively as the court of common pleas number one, number two, number three, number four, and number five, but the number of said courts may be by law increased, from time to time, and shall be in like manner designated by successive numbers. The number of judges in any of said courts, or in any county where the establishment of an additional court may be authorized by law, may be increased, from time to time, and whenever such increase shall amount in the whole to three, such three judges shall compose a distinct and separate court as aforesaid, which shall be numbered as aforesaid. In Philadelphia all suits shall be instituted in the said courts of common pleas without designating the number of the said court, and the several courts shall distribute and apportion the business among them in such manner as shall be provided by rules of court, and each court, to which any suit shall be thus assigned, shall have exclusive jurisdiction thereof, subject to change of venue, as shall be provided by law.

In the county of Allegheny all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the several numbered courts of common pleas shall be vested in one court of common pleas, composed of all the judges in commission in said courts. Such jurisdiction and powers shall extend to all proceedings at law and in equity which shall have been instituted in the several numbered courts, and shall be subject to such changes as may be made by law, and subject to change of venue as provided by law. The president judge of said court shall be selected as provided by law. The number of judges in said court may be by law increased from time to time. This amendment shall take effect on the first day of January succeeding its adoption.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to section eight, article nine, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in accordance with the provisions of the eighteenth article thereof:—

Amendment to Article Nine, Section Eight.

Section 2. Amend section eight, article nine, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, which reads as follows:—

"Section 8. The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the assent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law; but any city, the debt of which now exceeds seven per centum of such assessed valuation, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum, in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation," so as to read as follows:—

Section 8. The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the assent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law; but any city, the debt of which now exceeds seven per centum of such assessed valuation, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum, in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation, except that any debt or debts hereinafter incurred by the city and county of Philadelphia for the construction and development of subways for transit purposes, or for the construction of wharves and docks, or the reclamation of land to be used in the construction of a system of wharves and docks, as public improvements, owned or to be owned by said city and county of Philadelphia, and which shall yield to the city and county of Philadelphia current net revenue in excess of the interest on said debt or debts and of the annual installments necessary for the cancellation of said debt or debts, may be excluded in ascertaining the power of the city and county of Philadelphia to become otherwise indebted: Provided, That a sinking fund for their cancellation shall be established and maintained.

UP AGAINST A FREEZE-OUT.

One would quite naturally suppose that even though the Democratic bosses secretly picked out and slated the candidates they want nominated for County offices, they would at least have allowed the other Democratic aspirants a decent run for their money. Apparently the "others" are not to be given any run at all—not even a lame-horse walk. That is, if the bosses are able to get away with their scheme.

It now develops that the Democratic candidates not on the slate are up against a cold-blooded game of freeze-out, the cards are stacked against them and the bosses doing the dealing.

The Democratic slate-makers have arranged to hold a secret conference to plan trading off those not on the slate for those who are slated. The slated candidates only have been invited. The "others" are not wanted. Their presence would be embarrassing. The slated candidates being a party to the deal are not confessing to knowledge of it. This is a part of the plot. It may be clever politics, no doubt the bosses think it is, but true American spirit admires fair play and despises treachery.

The trickery planned will prevent the nomination of Democrats who otherwise would have been nominated, but we do not for one moment believe that such methods are approved by the rank and file of the Democrats of Centre County.

We have heard a lot in the past few months about the need of throwing out certain Democratic bosses in the State. It might be a good thing to throw out the Democratic bosses nearer home who have so wantonly betrayed the confidence of men in their party who honestly, even though foolishly, believed when they announced their candidacy that they would have a fair show, and not a freeze-out, at the primaries.

Wedding at State College.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Smith, at State College, was the scene of a pretty event on Wednesday of last week when their daughter, Miss Hattie Williams, became the bride of Frank E. Leonard, of New Kingston, Cumberland County. The wedding ceremony was performed at high noon, the officiating minister being Rev. Ira S. Sassaman, pastor of Grace Lutheran church, at State College. The bride was handsomely dressed in white silk and was attended by her sister, Miss Minerva Smith, who was dressed in white embroidery. The groom was attended by Raymond Dunn, of Carlisle. Following the ceremony a delicious wedding breakfast was served and early in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Leonard departed on their honeymoon trip. They will reside at New Kingston. Mr. Leonard is a graduate of the Penn State College school of agriculture and is a splendid young man. He is meeting with gratifying success in his field of labor, that of horticulture. The bride is an accomplished and charming young lady. With her parents she formerly resided at Millheim. The happy young couple have a host of admiring friends who wish them much joy and success in their married life.

Ghouls at Work at Canonsburg.

Evidence was developed that during the panic at the Morgan opera house in which 26 lives were sacrificed and scores injured, vandals were busy robbing the unfortunate victims.

Although 25 special officers were sworn in to frustrate any such attempt, the fiends succeeded in pilfering from those who were dead or had sustained injuries, money, jewelry, watches and in fact anything of value. So many persons were assisting in the work of rescue that it was almost impossible for the police to detect the thieves, and excellent opportunities were afforded them while they were carrying the dead and injured from the bottom of the landing at the entrance to the theatre.

Married at Boalsburg.

With Rev S. C. Stover, the pastor, officiating, George S. Yarnell, of Linden Hall, and Miss Marian M. Meiss, of Tusseyville, were married in the Boalsburg Reformed church parsonage on Sunday last. The happy young couple are well and favorably known in their home communities and their numerous friends wish them much joy and success.

Center Is Fixed.

The center of population of the United States was announced by director of the census bureau as to be in the western part of the city of Bloomington, Monroe county, Ind. This is eight miles further west than the location announced July 17, when Director Durand placed it four and one-quarter miles south of Unionville, in the same county.

HUSTLING FOR VOTES

Taking all of these requirements into consideration we apply them to two women whom we believe will not fail to make good if elected to the Public School Board of Bellefonte. We, therefore, present to the Woman's Club the names of Mrs. Roger S. Brouse, of the West Ward, and Mrs. Charles Gilmore, of the North Ward, as the candidates for the important office of school director, each to serve two years. They are not to run against each other. Both should be elected. The nominations of the committee do not debar other names. If the ladies of the Club desire to nominate other women it is your privilege to do so.

The Campaign Committee is the Executive Board of the Woman's Club. It appointed chairman and deputies for the three wards of the town, giving power to the chairman to increase the size of the committee if they deem it necessary. The Executive Board suggests that the ladies who are not club members be asked to lend a helping hand on these committees and in that way enlist the interest of many influential people. The deputies are expected to report results to their chairman who in turn will report to the Executive Board through the President.

To do effective work every woman must do her duty. We cannot vote, but we are influential and can poll a large number of votes if we follow the best methods used by our men voters and candidates. Be familiar with the points favoring our cause; have confidence in your arguments and results; be convincing and determined to win.

There need be no expense connected with the campaign, neither need there be offers to exchange votes. Mass meetings are not advisable, since it is individual work that counts. The town must be thoroughly canvassed; every house visited; every man urged to give his vote to the women candidates. This method emphasizes to the voters, their responsibility to the Board of Education. Among the foreigners these visits are of great value.

Since the election is borough and not ward our prospects appear to be somewhat brighter. Mrs. Brouse is a Democrat with a Republican husband; Mrs. Gilmore is a whole Republican; but as merit and ability are included in our platform, we call attention to the fact that it is possible to work for the nomination and election without endorsing any party. Their petitions were each signed by both Democrats and Republicans in good standing.

The Publicity Committee's opportunities are manifestly powerful. As "The pen is mightier than the sword," the Executive Board urges you to keep our object before the people through well-defined, well-written, spicy campaign articles, in circular letters and inserted in all of the town newspapers. The chairman of this committee is Mrs. Elmer E. Davis. The campaign chairmen; are North Ward, Mrs. John S. Walker; West Ward, Miss Mary Meek, and South Ward, Miss E. Jane Aikens.

Fifteen names of qualified voters were secured for each designated party and forwarded to the County Commissioners with the candidate petitions.

The Primaries will be held on September 30 from 2 o'clock P. M. to 8 o'clock P. M. If our candidates receive the nomination, then it behooves every woman to work faithfully for their election, and never cease until the polls close on election day, November 7, 1911. Urge the voters to look for the names of the women candidates on the ballot and to vote for them.

We will meet with opposition, of course, but be prepared to fight it and begin that preparation now. A political worker said that while men believed the women made good directors, they weakened the ticket as they were not "vote getters." If we meet with defeat, let it not be by a small number of votes, but be seeds planted that will bring a harvest later.

There is no more important work than the placing of women on the School Boards, and we must impress upon voters the urgent need for women school directors. The best interests of our schools and our school children need women on the school board. Special emphasis must be placed on the work for the primaries, for if a candidate fails there, she has no further chance.

BELL RINGS SATURDAY

From Philipsburg were received a bundle of petitions for candidates for nomination on the Socialist party ballot. While no official opinion has been rendered, it is stated that the Socialists are not entitled under the law to a party ballot in Centre County, owing to the failure of the party to poll the required percentage of the highest vote cast in the County. If this is made the official ruling the Socialists will be compelled to use nomination papers to place the names of their candidates on the ballot for November. The petitions in question were for the following: William Slee, school director; Howard Simler, councilman in Third ward; M. Gene Mark, inspector in Third ward; John G. Frantz, constable; Edward Wilson, judge of election in Third ward.

Three women have been entered as candidates for Democratic nomination for church trustees in Philipsburg. They are Mrs. George W. McGaffey, Miss Annie McGirk and Mrs. William Bair.

For school directors in Bellefonte petitions have been filed for the following: Dr. M. J. Locke, Rep., 6 years; D. F. Fortney, Dem., 6 years; M. R. Johnson, Rep., 4 years.

Road Drops 81,870 Men.

A report from Chicago, just out gives the number of employes dropped on 60 per cent. of the railway mileage of the country in the last year as 81,870, a saving of $94,000,000 in wages.

As bearing on the present wage dispute between the railway shop men and the roads the figures given above are considered by Robert Lovett, chairman of the board of the Harriman lines, and other railroad men to be of significance.

Part of Its Weight Was Gold.

George Lentz killed a chicken for the family dinner recently and is rather glad that he did it. In the chicken's craw was found a five-dollar gold piece which will be converted into a watch charm. The bird belonged to the Lentz-Horton farm and was raised on the sandy plot opposite Sylvan Dell. Mr. Lentz doesn't know how the chick managed to be so expert with his bill as to corral a "five-spot."—Williamasport Sun.

RUNNING RABBITS.

The following letter was received from Joseph Kalbfus, secretary of the State Game Commission, by a Bellefonte reader that contains some general information:

"In regard to the running of rabbits by dogs I would say the only remedy is the killing of the dog so found. Any land owner or lessee of lands may kill any dog found on his property running rabbits out of season if the dog does not wear a collar to which is attached a tax-tag and a name-plate, giving the name and address of the owner in English; if the dog so found does have a collar and tag the owner of the dog must first be notified to keep his dog off the land in question or have his dog killed, in which case if the dog again comes on the land in question the owner of the land may kill it."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

While on a professional jaunt down Penns valley last Friday, tarrying at Spring Mills a while, Col. T. B. Jamison followed the commands of the Good Book and took us in, and to our utter surprise we found an old farmer, past three score and ten manipulating a typewriter with as much ease and skill as a clerk in his teens. With his insurance business and that as Justice of the Peace, the Squire is a very busy man of affairs and one of the kind one is always glad to walk across the street to meet.

Dr. W. H. Fry, of Pine Grove Mills, passed through here the other day. He said there was a sick horse over in the valley that he was on his way to see, but our suspicion is that he was out to see how many Democrats he could get in line to vote for him for the Democratic nomination for County Commissioner. Billie goes on the principle that to the victor belongs the spoils.

John Lykens was a Bellefonte visitor over Sunday. John, what is the meaning of so many trips to town lately, and why are they always over Sunday? You could go farther and do worse, so bring her along, John, and we'll give her the glad hand.

Almost every day one can see from two to three candidates in this neck o' woods, but the joke of the season is on one who came here last week and failed to find one man of his same political faith. After traveling around for about one hour, he exclaimed: "Me for Penns valley, where I have friends." The last seen of him he was beating it down the pike, humming that old hymn, "Lost in the desert of the deep."

"Nothing ventured, nothing won," said Miss Marie Haugh on Thursday of last week, so she made her first plunge into the real estate business. When the sale was over she found herself the possessor of the home of the late Thomas Lear. Scarcely was the ink dry on the papers when there were several parties looking over the property. Among the number was Daniel Sloteman, the popular foreman for the Hewitt-McNit Lumber Company. Daniel has an eye to business. He says that it will be four years' work here and that if he is lucky and gets the home he will be able to live in it during that time, for it will not be far from here once they move over to this side.

For the benefit of our brother correspondent, we will say in a few words that he is off his base when he calls us the popgun politician, for we don't belong to the popgun party. We did say that only for the popgun politics Scotia would be running, and we believe it still. One more year will settle that for the next generation, however, and by that time Scotia will be a thing of the past. As for the President signing all the tariff changing bills with a veto pen, that's what we put him there for, and what's more, he will be sent back for another term, and by that time he will not have to use his ax, for they will be more of one mind with him. Then the smoke will be rolling out of many stacks that now have birds nests in them.

To Keep a Rooster From Crowing.

How to keep a rooster from crowing until you are ready to get up is the problem that Chief of Police McWeeny of Chicago has been called upon to solve, and with the assistance of William Luthardt, he has succeeded. Recently the Chicago Tribune published an article that told of the chief's success in suppressing a crowing cock that disturbed his early morning slumbers. Since then he has received so many requests for his receipt that Secretary Luthardt has printed a little folder for distribution. This folder says. "It is natural for a rooster to crow, but in order to do so he must raise his head. A simple device to stop the bird from crowing is to nail a board twelve inches high above the perch in the chicken coop. This will prevent the rooster from raising its head to the proper angle for crowing, there by suppressing the clarion notes." Secretary Luthardt has decided to not apply for a patent, as he wishes all citizens to have full benefit of the idea without cost to them.

A Trifling Mistake

It Led to Turning the Careers of Two Persons Into a Single Channel.

By EGBERT CROSBY

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Letter carriers are proverbially careless in leaving mail at the wrong address, or, rather, having so many to leave, it is a wonder they don't make more mistakes than they do. Carelessness in the writer has perhaps more to do with letters being delivered to the wrong person than either of these causes.

One day a letter addressed in a feminine hand was left by the carrier for me. I opened it and read it. It was very short and to the point:

Ten p. m. Thursday at the fountain. Violets in my belt. Hold rose in your left hand. LAURA.

I opened my eyes very wide and gave a low whistle. Who could it be who was making an appointment with me? Then I looked again at the address. My name is Francis B. Marshall, and the superscription appeared to be F. B. Marshall, but it might have been F. B. Winchell. I thought over every person who might possibly desire to see me clandestinely, but could fix upon no one. What should I do in the matter? Should I return the letter to the postman? Since I had opened it, that would not do at all. Besides, I was not sure the letter was not for me. Should I keep the appointment and possibly risk intruding upon the secret of others? I finally decided to meet Laura and, if I was not the person she desired to meet, hand her her letter, that she might know it had been missent.

Since there was but one fountain in town, and that in the center of an open square, I was not in doubt as to the place designated for the meeting. It was a public place, where strangers might meet without being especially noticed. Laura had evidently never seen me nor I Laura, else we would not have to wear some mark by which to be known to each other.

When the clock in a church tower near by the park struck 10 I entered the park carrying a rose in my hand, and, approaching the fountain, stood leaning upon the basin looking at the tiny wavelets made by the water sprinkling down upon it. I had waited perhaps five minutes when I saw a lady advancing with some violets tucked in her belt. It occurred to me that she was purposely a trifle late that she might inspect me before I should be able to inspect her and did not doubt that she had got a view of me while I was standing under the lighted fountain. As she approached I advanced to meet her, lifting my hat at the same time. As we walked away together she said:

"Let me explain to you why I have arranged this meeting instead of calling at your office or asking you to come and see me. As you are aware, Mr. Lathrop's death without a will has put the estate in a tangle. I am not so sure that he did not leave a will in my favor. I am the only daughter of his favorite brother and took care of him during his last illness. He said to me on several occasions: 'Marion, I have made a will leaving everything to you. You will find it in the tin box in which I keep all my papers in the closet of my bedroom.' When I opened the box after the funeral it was not there."

This revealed to me that the letter sent me had not been intended for me. But though I am not a professional detective I think I have a detective's instinct, for in this case so far as the girl had imparted it to me I thought I smelled rascality, and its uncovering interested me. I permitted her to go on.

"I saw your personal stating that you had a knowledge of such a will and would like to see me regarding the matter. My cousin, Edgar Bangs, who will inherit with me under the law concerning estates where there is no will, is a very bad man. Mr. Lathrop lent him money till Edgar showed that he was dishonest; then his uncle turned him off. Edgar may have stolen the will in order that I shall have to divide the estate with him and others. It would not give him very much, but a little will be better than nothing, and Edgar is in desperate straits."

"It is your duty," I said, "as well as your interest, to do all you can to prevent your uncle's estate from going where it was not intended, especially to such a person as you describe."

"Edgar has a suspicion that I am on the track of the lost will and is watching me like a cat; therefore I didn't dare communicate with you except clandestinely. Now I have explained everything to you I am ready to hear what you have to say, Mr. Winchell."

The last word—the name—enabled me to get more of the story in case I chose to do so without giving away the fact that I was an outsider. I concluded to do so.

"Have you any means," I asked, "at your disposal to pay for information that will lead to the recovery of the lost, probably stolen, will?"

"Not a cent."

The lady had by this time removed her veil, and I had caught a glimpse of her face as we passed under street lamps. She appeared to be about twenty years old and was decidedly comely. Under an impulse I decided to take up the case for her, find out if she were about to fall into the hands of swindlers and, if she were, protect her.

"Permit me to assure you," I said, "that in me you have a friend."

"I do not doubt it."

"Why not?"

"I can tell a dishonest man the moment I see him. You are trustworthy."

"Thank you. Now give me an address to which I can write you."

I gave her a bit of paper torn from a letter I had in my pocket and a pencil. She wrote "Laura G. Ostrander, 127 D street." It was the house of a friend to whom she had confided her case.

I left her at the door of her own house and went to my room. Before going to bed I wrote a note disguised for a feminine hand, addressed to F. B. Winchell. The letter that had come to me had no street and number on it, so none was needed on the note I wrote. I informed Mr. Winchell that at a certain hour on a certain night he would find a carriage standing at a certain place. He was to get into the carriage, where he would find "Laura," who would hear what he had to say. Having sealed my note, I went out and posted it. Then I went to bed rather to think of my adventure than to sleep.

On the evening in question, covered with a woman's raincoat reaching to my heels and a woman's hat shaped like an inverted pot that would conceal my features, I entered a carriage and drove to the place I had designated. I had been there five minutes when a man approached the door and said:

"Laura!"

"Yes," I replied in a woman's contralto voice.

He entered the carriage, thinking he was with a woman and ignorant of the fact that he was with a man whose hand, in the pocket of the raincoat, grasped a cocked revolver. I had previously told the driver where to take us, and as soon as the man was seated beside me we were driven away.

"I am ready to hear what you have to say," I said.

"I can restore the will provided that you will obligate yourself to pay me $50,000 as soon as you receive the estate which will all be yours under the will."

"For whom are you acting?" I asked.

"That I do not care to state."

"Supposing your proposition to be accepted, when and where do you intend the papers shall be passed?"

"Whenever and wherever you like."

"Have you the will with you?"

"Yes."

"We might close the transaction now."

"Not here in the carriage."

"No. Thinking we might need a private place for such a purpose, I obtained of a friend of mine in the real estate business the key to a vacant cottage on the Centerville turnpike. There are writing materials there—indeed, everything we need."

"For a woman you have a good head for business. Are you sure this cottage is vacant?"

"Yes."

"Very well. Tell the driver to take us there."

"He has been told that already."

When we stopped at the door of the house the man asked me for the key and told me to remain where I was till he had explored the premises. I complied. He went into the house, lighted the gas and after some ten minutes' absence returned and politely handed me out of the carriage. I went into the house with him and, conducting him into a room in the center of which was a table with writing materials on it, shut the door. He sat down at the table and filled out a note for $50,000, payable thirty days after the maker should come into her estate, then gave it to me to sign. I read it and while doing so said: "Where is the will? Let me see it."

He took the will from his pocket and held it so that I could see that it was genuine. This was all I wished for. Putting my hand in the pocket of my raincoat, quick as a flash I leveled a revolver at him, holding it within a few feet of his face.

"Drop that!" I said in my natural voice.

He stood glaring at me, but powerless. I repeated the order, shoving my revolver close under his nose. Looking down the muzzle of a pistol, especially with an opponent's finger on the trigger, is not pleasant. The weapon might go off even accidentally. The man dropped the will on the table. I feared to remove my gaze from him to examine it lest he take advantage of my looking away to spring upon me. I was obliged to take the risk of its being the genuine document.

"Go out before me," I said, picking up the will, still keeping my eyes on him. He turned and left the house, I following him. When we reached the sidewalk I ordered him to walk away, and when he had reached what I thought a safe distance I jumped into the carriage, telling the driver to take me to my home. Before I slept I dropped a note in the mail for Miss Ostrander, asking her to meet me the next night at the fountain. She did so, and I handed her the recovered will.

My story is but an illustration of what trivial incidents shape our lives. Had my name and the name of the villain of this little drama not been so nearly alike the drama would never have been played. And, far more important than that, I should not have married the woman who is now my wife nor have been the father of the half dozen children who, with their mother, contribute to the whole charm of my existence.

Mark Twain Heeded the Voice.

Mark Twain was quite at his best as an after dinner speaker at the banquet given in his honor some years ago by the members of the Authors' club. Incidentally he told his amused listeners the story of his first lapse from the paths of honesty. He was very young at the time, he explained, and the day was an exceedingly hot once. As he walked down the street of the village in which he was living he saw a cart loaded with melons of most attractive appearance.

"It is with regret I mention," Mark Twain went on, with a humorous twinkle in his eyes, "that I was tempted and I fell. I grabbed the most likely looking melon of the lot and hurriedly made my way to the back of the woodshed. I gouged a huge slice out of it and bit it. No sooner had I done so when something within me convinced me that I had done wrong. A voice seemed to say, 'Mark, get up and take that melon right back to where you got it from.' It was about the greenest melon I had ever tasted. I went back to the cart and carefully replaced it and—took a ripe one in its place."—Boston Traveler.

Curious Old Legend.

Here is a curious legend of Cologne. Once upon a time there was a burgomeister of the town whose wife died and was buried. In the evening thieves, seeking to take jewels from the dead, opened the coffin. Now it happened that the woman was not dead, but in a trance, and when the thieves broke into her burial place she awoke and went to her home. There she called a servant, who ran in fear to his master and told him what had happened. The scared burgomeister replied to this, "I would sooner believe that my horses were looking out of the top floor window than believe that such a thing could be." Scarcely had the words left his mouth than he heard horses galloping up the stairs. In memory of this and of the return of his wife he had two horses' heads in stone set in a top floor window of his house, where they remain to this day.

A Real Patriot.

"Let's see," said the lawyer who had met an out of town acquaintance on a street car, according to the New Orleans Picayune, "doesn't your town soon hold an election?"

"It does."

"And I suppose you take a lively interest in it?"

"Well, not too lively—not as lively as I used to."

"Interest falling off, eh? Didn't you run for mayor two or three years ago?"

"I have run for mayor of my town seven successive times, sir."

"And been—been"—

"Been defeated every time, sir."

"Then you probably won't run again?"

"That's uncertain. I am going to inquire around and find if I am really the man they want. If I am, then I'll take the candidacy; if not, then I will try to defeat the man they do want."

The Line of Life.

The line of life curves from the side of the hand between the thumb and forefinger around the base of the thumb to the center of the wrist joint. According to chiromancy (the pretended art of judging the character and foretelling the fortune of a person from the aspect of the hand), if this line in the left palm is regular and deeply colored it predicts a long and happy life; tortuous, colorless, feebly marked and broken it announces ill health and short life; narrow, but long and well colored, it indicates wisdom and ingenuity; broad and pale it is a sign of folly; deep and unequally colored it denotes malice.—New York Telegram.

Coronation Graft.

The practice of running the fountains and conduits with wine on coronation day was abandoned after the reign of Queen Elizabeth, but another old custom was observed up to the coronation of George IV. After the king and the company had departed from the banquet in Westminster hall the doors were thrown open, and the people rushed in and cleared the tables of everything—victuals, cloths, plates, dishes, etc., all vanished in a few minutes. And, as Sir Walter Scott tells us, the nobility were not above taking away the saltcellars and spoons.

An Office Cushion.

If those of you who have a husband or brother or sister working in an office will go to the trouble of making a flat cushion for the chair of the worker you will find that it saves the trousers or skirt from getting "shiny" and also helps to retain the garment in form.—Good Housekeeping.

Speaking Truth.

Speaking truth is like writing fair and comes only by practice. It is less a matter of will than of habit, and I doubt if any occasion can be trivial which permits the practice and formation of such a habit.—Ruskin.

Time to Go.

"Pa, is a vessel a boat?"

"E—yes—you may call it that."

"Well, what kind of a boat is a blood vessel?"

"It's a lifeboat. Now run away to bed."—Boston Transcript.

Not Fast.

Odd Marriage Notices.

Here are some quaint old time marriage notices that have been dug up by the Springfield Union:

In Bozrah, August, 1819, Mr. John Bate of Williamstown, Mass., to Miss Mary Ann Bass of the former place, after a courtship of one hour.

Is not this angling well, I ask,
Such tender bait to take?
He caught in one small hour a Bass.
The Bass, though, caught the Bate

Married, at Bridgewater, Dec. 16, 1788, Captain Thomas Baxter of Quincy, aged sixty-six, to Miss Whitman of the former place, aged fifty-eight years, after a long and tedious courtship of forty-eight years, which they both sustained with uncommon fortitude.

In Boston, April, 1821, by the Rev. William Sabine, Joseph Willicut to Miss Susan Whitmarsh, after a tedious courtship of thirteen days, and but thirty-five days after the death of his former wife.

The best way, it seems, a deep sorrow to smother,
For the loss of a wife is—to marry another.

Heatstroke and Sunstroke.

Heatstroke and sunstroke are terms usually applied indifferently to either of two quite distinct conditions, to each of which only one of the names properly applies. Heatstroke, as its name implies, is a condition caused by the action of excessive heat, either the torrid heat of summer or the artificial heat of a foundry, a furnace, the stokehole of a steamship, etc. It occurs with almost as great frequency at night as in the day, and its victims may be overcome on a cloudy day or without having ventured from their homes. The other form, properly called sunstroke, is due to the direct action of the sun—probably of its ultra violet or chemical rays rather than of its heat rays. Only those who have been long exposed to the direct rays of the sun, such as soldiers on the march, harvesters, ball players, etc., are the subjects of true sunstroke.—Dr. T. L. Stedman in Good Housekeeping.

Responsive Flowers.

Karlstrom says flowers have understanding and know when persons care for them. He says they respond to a loving touch and to a caress. The Swedish collector touches flowers affectionately as he walks through his greenhouse and insists they have a language for those who understand. He points to a flower with drooping head and says it is calling for water. In different ways, he explains, flowers ask for light, warmth, sunshine, and when satisfied the flowers lift up their heads buoyantly and express the pure joy of being. Karlstrom advises the study of flowers through magnifying glasses, saying their beauty is not half appreciated otherwise. A flower under the glass, he asserts, reveals remarkable beauty and if taken to pieces discloses wonders never appreciated.—New York Press.

A Sensitive Horse.

Harsh treatment, though it stop short of inflicting physical pain, keeps a nervous horse in a state of misery. A single blow may be enough to spoil a racer. Daniel Lambert, founder of the Lambert branch of the Morgan family, was thought as a three-year-old to be the fastest trotting stallion of his day. He was a very handsome, stylish, intelligent horse and also extremely sensitive. His driver, Dan Mace, though one of the best reinsmen in America, once made the mistake, through ill temper or bad judgment, of giving Daniel Lambert a severe cut with the whip, and that single blow put an end to his usefulness as a trotter. He became wild and ungovernable in harness and remained so for the rest of his life.

How Kangaroos Fight.

Kangaroos are distributed over all parts of Queensland. The "old man," or fully grown male, is mostly found on downs and in open forest country. An "old man" sometimes grows to the height of six feet and when hunted into a rocky gorge or corner will turn and face its pursuer. It is a formidable adversary at close quarters. Its mode of fighting is to clasp its enemy in its arms, hug him to its breast and then with its powerful hind claws rip him open.

Turn About.

"Papa says if I give up my singing lessons he will present me with a pair of diamond earrings."

"You have never worn earrings, have you?"

"No; I should have to have my ears pierced."

"Ah, yes! I see his idea. He want to pay you back in your own coin!"

A Dubious Compliment.

Dobby was showing off his baby.

"Think he looks like me, Slithers?" he asked.

"Well—no," said Slithers, looking at the youngster critically. "He's a queer looking little cuss all right, but I shouldn't go as far as to say that he looks like you."—Judge.

Woman's Woes.

As soon as a married woman gets $00 saved up she becomes oppressed by the thought that she is merely accumulating a fortune for the second wife to spend.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Our Near Neighbors.

Mother — Don't you know, darling, that we are commanded to love our neighbors? Little One — Yes, an' I s'pose that's 'cause we can get along with most everybody else.—Exchange.

It is far better to be innocent than penitent, to prevent the malady than invent the remedy.—Secker.

Celebrated Golden Wedding.

Upwards of 100 of the children, grandchildren and friends of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Bridgens assembled at the home of that worthy couple on West Water street, Mill Hall, on Friday afternoon to assist in the celebration of the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Bridgens, says the Lock Haven Express.

Mrs. Bridgens, whose maiden name was Kunes, and John T. Bridgens, were married at Eagleville September 1, 1861, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Kunes, by Squire Sterling, and soon after went to housekeeping at that place. Mr. Bridgens enlisted in Company G. Two Hundred and Third regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and went to the front and after the close of the war returned to Eagleville, where the couple resided until about 20 years ago, when they moved to Mill Hall, where they have resided ever since, respected by all who know them.

Among the guests from out of town were the following: Mrs. D. B. Kunes, Mrs. M. J. Eagan, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Kunes, of Blanchard; Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Kunes, Mrs. W. F Gunsallus, Mr. and Mrs. Williams Bridgens, of Beech Creek; Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Byler, of Altoona; Miss Rose Cathers, Mrs. Milford Kunes, of Lake, Miss.; Mrs. Martha Gunsallus, Nittany; Mrs. D. Kerns and Miss Lenna Whitman, of Hublersburg; Mr. and Mrs. James Gunsallus, of Huston; Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Bitner, of Lock Haven; Mrs. S. J. Seese, Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Hall, Renovo; Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Rothrock and Mrs. James F. Till, Lock Haven.

Death at Blanchard.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bechdel, widow of the late John Bechdel, died at her late home near Blanchard on Tuesday of last week. Deceased was aged 60 years, 11 months and 13 days and resided in Liberty township the greater part of her life. She was a devout Christian woman and was an active and consistent member of the Disciple church. Surviving are two daughters and two sons: Miss Edith, at home; Mrs. Joesph McCloskey, of Jersey Shore; Curtis and Harris, at home. Funeral services ware held on Thursday afternoon, at 2 o'clock conducted by Rev. W. H. Patterson, pastor of the Disciple church. Interment was made in the Disciple cemetery, the casket bearers being Thomas Bechdel, C. A. Williams, J. Irvin Clark, John B. Miller, Nathan J. Bitner and James Bowes.

Death of Ralph Mann.

Old Bellefonte friends of the family will learn with sincere regret of the death on Friday afternoon of last week of Ralph Mann, who passed away at his late home at Lewistown. Deceased was 39 years of age and was a son of the late Fearon Mann, the family being well known here and an one time residing in what is now the Mrs. Louisa Harris property, on Allegheny Street. Fearon Mann, it will be recalled, operated the axe works at Axe Mann. For some time Ralph had beening in failing health. Throughout his extended illness he was ever cheerful and patiently awaited the end which he realized was inevitable. His death occurred about 4 o'clock on Friday afternoon, and followed a sinking spell from which he failed to rally.

Trolley Kills Child.

Six-years-old Raymond Nestlerode, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Nestlerode, was instantly killed by a trolley car on Thursday of last week at Johnstown, to which place the family recently removed. The child's mother had sent him on an errand across the street, to by some eggs, and he became confused at the rapid approach of two trolley cars. One of the cars knocked him down and injured him so badly about the head that he died a few seconds later. The grief-stricken parents and the child's one surviving brother accompanied the body to the home of Mrs. Martin, at Blanchard, where interment was made on Sunday afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock. The burial was made in the Disciple cemetery.

A Great Advantage to Working Men.

J. A. Maple, 125, 7th St., Steubenville, O., says: For years I suffered from weak kidneys and a severe bladder trouble. I learned of Foley Kidney Pills and their wonderful cures so I began taking them and sure enough I had as good results as any I heard about. My backache left me and to one of my business, expressman, that alone is a great advantage. My kidneys acted free and normal, and that saved me a lot of misery. It is now a pleasure to work where it used to be a misery. Foley Kidney Pills have cured me and have my highest praise." Sold by C. M. Parrish.

Dr. Johnson and Fruit.

The return of the strawberry season was always heartily welcomed by Dr. Johnson, for, as he once declared, of strawberries and cream he never could have too much. Fortunately he sometimes had opportunity to indulge his taste to the full, for his friend, Dr. Taylor of Lichfield, whom he contrived when possible to visit at strawberry time, was rather a noted fruit grower, and when at his house it was, as Johnson said, with gusto, "Strawberries and cream, toujours strawberries and cream!" A voracious eater at any time, Johnson's appetite for fruit was almost limitless. Mrs. Thrale tells us that he used often to eat half a dozen peaches before breakfast, and then frequently she had heard him complain that never in all his life had he quite as much wall fruit as he desired, save once. The exceptional occasion was during a visit to Lord Sandys' seat at Ombersley. The exact quantity he then devoured has not been recorded, but he was accused of clearing a whole wall side.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Light of Crystals.

All diamonds do not shine in the dark after exposure to sunlight or electric light, but some do to a remarkable degree. A diamond rubbed with a woolen cloth or against a hard surface will sometimes shine brilliantly. The emission of light is a property belonging to many if not all kinds of crystals.

A variety of white marble found at Hastings-on-the-Hudson, N. Y., gives out a flame colored glow when pounded and bright flashes when scratched with steel. In northern New York is found a kind of stone known locally as "hell fire rock," which exhibits bright sulphur colored streaks when scratched in the dark. Pieces of rose quartz rubbed together exhibit brilliant flashes, sometimes bright enough to illuminate the hands of the person holding them. Smoked quartz and other varieties sometimes show a similar phenomenon. — Chicago Record-Herald.

Not Lively.

Anna Maria Wilhelmina Pickering, in her memoirs, edited by her son, tells a Yorkshire incident which contains a great deal of human nature. Variety spices life. The plan is monotonous until its extent entitles it to the name of prairie or desert and it gains interest through vastness.

There was an old couple in the village whom I used often to go to see. One day when I found them sitting, one on each side of the fire, the old man said to me:

"Well, t'missis and me, we've been married nigh on fifty years, and we've never had one quarrel."

The old woman looked at me with a twinkle in her eye and said:

"It war varie conscientious, but varie dool."

The Bloody Hand.

The noted English family of the Holtes has for its badge a bloody hand, and this sinister badge commemorates a wager that ended in a crime. Sir Thomas Holte one day in 1612 was hunting. He invited his comrades home with him to dinner, and as he rode along he made a heavy bet on his cook's punctuality. But the cook failed him for once. When he got home dinner was not ready. The jeers of his companions at this failure, together with his huge loss in the matter of the wager, enraged him so that he ran into the kitchen, seized a cleaver and split the cook's head open with it. Afterward his family, to keep this crime alive, adopted for its crest the bloody hand of the cook killer.

An Eskimo's Dwelling.

We do not look for any great amount of inventive genius among the Eskimos, but for years they have employed a rather complete respirator, used in the preparation and taking of a vapor bath, as a means of protection from the dense smoke. This Eskimo respirator is a little basket woven of twisted strands of fine grass. It is placed with its shallow side against the mouth, and a wooden peg, which arises from the center of the basket, is held between the teeth. For this purpose water is evaporated over a big fire in a very low hut, which is tightly closed to keep in the heat. In this stifling atmosphere the employment of a respirator is absolutely necessary.—London Globe.

The Tyrolese.

You may find the artistic temperament among the peasants in the villages of Bavarian Tyrol. They talk still of the King Ludwig, who lavished money on palaces and died an insane suicide and murderer. You remind them that they are still paying off the debts of the mad king. They reply cheerfully that they are glad of it, for Ludwig loved music and gave us Wagner.—London Chronicle.

A Stirring Appeal.

The following epistle was sent by an angry tenant to his landlord:

Dear Sir—I want them sellar steps fixed right off. My wife fel down last nite and like to broke her blame neck. Please send blumbber and figs our bath tub it will soon be time now for us to use him agen and oblige. Yours trule, — —.

China as a Bluffer.

Professor Ian C. Hannah in his book, "Eastern Asia—A History," says that taxicabs, or, rather, automatic registers attached to horse cabs, were invented about 630 A. D., during the Tang dynastry in China. In his opinion the Chinese empire is "the greatest bluff in the world," and it suggests to him a very ancient Chinese fable, which he relates.

A monkey was captured by a tiger. He whined that he was thin and his flesh of poor taste, but he knew of a fine fat donkey for the tiger. The tiger consented to be led to where the donkey was tied. When the donkey saw them coming he was frightened, but recovered his composure and bawled in his masterful donkey voice:

"Monkey, you used to bring me two tigers. Why only one today?"

The tiger did a record hustle back to the jungle.

China, says Professor Hannah, has shown much of that donkey's resourcefulness in its history.

Two Women.

In her book "Woman and Labor" Olive Schreiner gives an amusing illustration of the fact that it is not the amount of money a person has which makes him or her a parasite on society, but the way it is used.

"The wife of an American millionaire," says Mrs. Schreiner, "was visited by a woman, the daughter and widow of a small professional man. She stated that she was in need of both food and clothing. The millionaire's wife gave her a leg of mutton and two valuable dresses. The woman proceeded to whine, though in vigorous health, that she had no one to carry them home for her. The American, the descendant of generations of able, laboring, New England Puritan women, tucked the leg of mutton under one arm and the bundle of clothes under the other and walked off down the city street toward the woman's dwelling, followed by the astonished pauper parasite."

The Size of Some Stars.

M. Nordmann of the Paris observatory believes that he has devised a successful method of determining the diameters of stars by a comparison of their effective temperatures with their parallaxes. In the case of some of the brightest stars he has reached interesting results. Thus he finds that Aldebaran, the bright star in Taurus, is veritably a giant sun, the ratio of its diameter to that of our sun being greater than that of the sun to the planet Jupiter. This means that Aldebaran has a diameter probably not less than 8,000,000 miles, or more than thirty times the distance from the earth to the moon. On the other hand, Sirius, or the dog star, to our eyes the brightest of all the stars, is, according to M. Nordmann, but little larger than our sun.

Juggernaut.

Juggernaut—or "lord of the world"—was supposed to be one of the incarnations of Krishna. The idol is formed of an irregular pyramidal black stone, with two large diamonds to represent eyes. The nose and mouth are painted vermilion. An immense number of pilgrims visit the idol annually, reaching up into the millions. Juggernaut worship used to be a terrible thing, but it is not what it once was. The state allowance to the temple was suspended by the Indian government in 1851, and the festivals are growing less and less popular year by year. The growing intelligence of the people and the restraining influence of the government are doing their work, and Juggernaut is steadily losing ground.—New York American.

Tea Tremens.

"I used to be a tea taster in Hankow," said a New York tea dealer, "but I got a bad attack of tea tremens and had to give up the job. Tea tremens is a recognized disease among Chinese tea tasters. These men don't swallow a drop of tea from one week's end to another. They simply hold the tea in the mouth, get an idea of its aroma and then eject it, but nevertheless the aroma of the tea causes violent nervous attacks, with sleeplessness and even hallucinations that are known all over China as tea tremens. I have never had delirium tremens, but if it's one-half as bad as the tea sort I pity the poor victim."

When a Soft Drink Is Hard.

"You are arrested on a very serious charge, my good man," began the court, looking at the man severely. "You are accused of getting into a fight and hitting the complainant over the head with a bottle. What have you to say for yourself?"

"Your honor, I didn't mean to hurt him. I never thought that it would hurt him very much, 'cause the bottle contained nothing but a soft drink," returned the prisoner. — Milwaukee Free Press.

The Timid One.

An officer in the army, noted for his bravery, laughed at a timid woman because she was alarmed at the noise of a cannon when a salute was fired. The brave officer subsequently married that timid woman, and six months afterward he took off his boots in the hall when he came in late at night.—London Telegraph.

Funeral of Mrs. John Liggett.

The funeral of Mrs. John Liggett was held on Friday afternoon of last week from the Methodist Episcopal church at Beech Creek, the services being conducted by Rev. R. S. Taylor, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mrs. Liggett was the last woman on the list of members who belonged to what was the old plastered Methodist Episcopal church and who later identified themselves with the new brick church, which was built in Beech Creek in 1869. Her husband is now the sole surviving member of the old flock. The funeral services were largely attended, those present from a distance including Mrs. Sarah Kimmerer, of Shreve, Ohio, sister of the deceased; Mrs. Sarah L. Gray, of Half Moon, sister of Mr. Liggett; Mrs. Charles Vanderhoof, of Canal Fulton, Ohio, a niece; Mrs. Floda Buckwalter, of Pittsburg, a niece; Rev. and Mrs. Glenn, of Philipsburg; Miss Esther Gray, Half Moon; Mrs. Susan Holter, Mrs. Jennie Curtin, of Curtin; Mrs. William Elliott, of Pittsburg; County Superintendent Ira N. How To Apply Lime.

Lime should be applied to the surface of the plowed land. This may be done when preparing land for corn for oats or for wheat. The ultimate end of liming is to secure heavy clover, and lime is probably most effective for clover when applied to the soil one year before the clover is seeded, but good results are obtained from drilling lime into the ground immediately previous to the seeding to wheat when clover is to follow in the spring. Where lime is cheap and a farmer can afford to make an application of 40 bushels or more per acre a manure spreader will do reasonably good work.

"The Only Thing That Will Relieve Neuralgia."

The piercing pains of Neuralgia, which often follows a bad cold or La Grippe, are frequently almost unbearable and few medicines afford any relief to the sufferer.

"I am a rural mail carrier and have been a user of the Dr. Miles medicines for years.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills can't be beaten. They are the only thing I have found that will relieve my neuralgia and I have tried most everything, besides medicine from the doctor. I am willing to tell anyone what the Anti-Pain Pills did for me."

The latter is a good fellow but he is on the wrong side of the political fence, and the worst of it is that he won't crawl over.

THINK THIS OVER.

You say you can make more from your surplus than a life insurance policy will make for you.

How much comfort of mind will your "increased earnings" bring you when you are ill and face the question of your family's needs?

Mental worry and illness combined speeds death.

Mental ease contributes to longevity.

A Royal Union policy is the greatest balm in the world for that feeling of uncertainty about your family's future if you are no longer here to provide for them, and for the time when age will impair your activity. No policy is better secured or yields a better return to its holder than the ones issued by the Royal Union.

Boys, and Their Clothes

Ordinarily Boys' Clothes are purchased by the parents, but the boys we have known seem invariably to have been supplied with a world of ideas of their own.

This is the kind we have chosen and incidentally they have the quality and value demanded by American parents.

They are the highest class in the world but are moderately priced.
